Experience

Freelance Designer
San Francisco, CA
2012–Present

I work with a variety of media to craft engaging products and experiences in printed and digital formats. I have collaborated with a wide range of clients from non-profits, entrepreneurs, start-ups, universities, to multi-national corporations.

Designer
Graphics Center
San Francisco, CA
January 2013–Present

A designer at the Graphic Center takes on projects from various student organizations at University of San Francisco. These assignments are finished in a timely manner due to the quick turnaround with on-campus events and activities. I have designed unique apparel, posters, other stationary for several clubs and students groups on campus. I also redesigned the Graphics Center website and focused on usability and a responsive layout for multiple devices.

Design Intern
University of San Francisco
San Francisco, CA
May 2013–September 2013

In the summer of 2013, I was an Intern at the USF Publication Department in the Office of Communications & Marketing. I created and updated print and digital projects under the supervision of creative director. I was immersed in an agency style work environment where I worked alongside account managers, copywriters, and other designers to craft captivating print projects that reflected the integrity of the USF graphic identity.

Founder
Evoba Clothing
Walla Walla, WA
July 2010–November 2012

Evoba was my crash course into the world of design. I started the this sole proprietorship as a means to experiment with branding, marketing, and graphic design. I quickly adapted my skills to learn financial accounting, e-commerce management, international sourcing, marketing, art file preparation, and web design. Over the course of two years, I designed over 50 products, maintained social media campaign collaborated with other artists and manufacturers.
